Meal Preferences

<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	Vegetarian	abstains from eating meat (including poultry, seafood, and sometimes insects), but they typically include plant-based foods like fruits, vegetables, grains, legumes, nuts, and seeds in their diet
<input type="checkbox"/>	Vegan	excludes all animal products from their diet and lifestyle. This includes not only meat but also dairy, eggs, honey, and any other products derived from animals
<input type="checkbox"/>	Pescatarian	similar to vegetarians but include fish and other seafood in their diet. They avoid meat from land animals but consume animal products from the sea
<input type="checkbox"/>	Paleo	focuses on consuming foods that were available to humans during the Paleolithic era. This includes meats, fish, fruits, vegetables, nuts, and seeds, while excluding grains, legumes, dairy, refined sugar, and processed foods
<input type="checkbox"/>	Low Carb/Keto	focuses on low-carbohydrate, high-fat diet designed to induce a state of ketosis, where the body burns fat for fuel instead of carbohydrates. It typically involves consuming moderate protein, high-fat foods, and very few carbohydrates
<input checked="" type="checkbox"/>	Gluten-Free	avoid foods containing gluten, a protein found in wheat, barley, rye, and their derivatives. This diet is essential for individuals with celiac disease or gluten sensitivity.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Lactose-Free	lactose intolerant avoids dairy products containing lactose, a type of sugar found in milk and dairy.
<input type="checkbox"/>	Kosher	based on Jewish religious principles and dictate which foods are permissible (kosher) and which are not. Permissible foods include certain meats (prepared according to kosher guidelines), fruits, vegetables, grains, and dairy products. Forbidden foods include pork, shellfish, and the mixing of meat and dairy products
<input type="checkbox"/>	Halal	based on Islamic law and include foods that are permissible (halal) and those that are forbidden (haram). Permissible foods include halal meats, fruits, vegetables, grains, and dairy products, while forbidden foods include pork and its derivatives, alcohol, and animals improperly slaughtered
